BACKGROUND

Did You Know?
French author Jules Verne (1828–1905) is generally considered to be the first serious writer of science fiction. He wrote at a time when the public was becoming fascinated with the potential of science to change people’s lives. In his writing, Verne imagined devices and human abilities that did not become realities until after his death. His characters rode in airplanes and submarines before anyone had seen one. His books include From the Earth to the Moon, Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea, and A Journey to the Center of the Earth.

Competing in Science
Madeleine L’Engle wrote A Wrinkle in Time in the early 1960s, when science was a popular topic around the world. The United States was trying to be the first country in the world to send people into space. Anything that contributed to this goal received the utmost attention.

Throughout the 1950s, the former Soviet Union and the United States competed with each other extensively in many areas, including in science. The Soviet Union was the first nation to put a satellite in orbit and excelled in other areas of science. To improve its space program, the U.S. government established the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). In the early 1960s, U.S. President John F. Kennedy promised to put an American on the moon “before the decade was out.” NASA trained crews of astronauts and improved space exploration equipment to prepare for the attempt. It was during this period of early space exploration that L’Engle wrote A Wrinkle in Time.

QUOTATIONS INDEX

Mrs. Who uses quotations throughout A Wrinkle in Time because she has trouble expressing herself in her own words. The quotations and traditional sayings are always short and illustrate a point in the story. Your assignment is to think about the use of the quotation and its effectiveness or lack thereof. In the “Notes” column, record your thoughts about what Mrs. Who is trying to convey. Stretch your thinking: Do the quotations guide you toward discovering one of the themes in the novel? If so, what themes do you see emerging in the novel?

A Wrinkle in Time Chapters 5–8

FOCUS ACTIVITY

Many stories examine the conflict between good and evil. What examples of goodness do you see in the world around you?

Think-Pair-Share

Make a list of good works, such as food and clothing drives, in which people in your community are involved. Then share your list with a partner and discuss other ways that people can promote goodness in your community and in the world.

Setting a Purpose

In this section, Meg, Charles Wallace, and Calvin learn about an evil power that threatens the universe. Read to discover how the children try to deal with it.

BACKGROUND

Did You Know?

Before the children begin their travels, Mrs. Whatsit, Mrs. Who, and Mrs. Which warn them of an ongoing cosmic struggle between good and evil. To illustrate this struggle, they use many allusions. An allusion is a reference in a work of literature to another work of literature or to a well-known person, place, or event in history. Writers often use allusions to express complex ideas. Sometimes the allusions are direct, such as quotations from historical figures. Sometimes, however, allusions are less obvious. For example, the Murry’s dog Fortinbras is named after a character in Shakespeare’s play Hamlet who is strong and brave in military matters. In a subtle way, the allusion tells you something about the dog and something about the people who named him. You might guess that the Murrys enjoy literature and value strength and courage. Watch for allusions in chapters 5–8 and throughout the novel.

Tesseract

When Meg, Calvin, and Charles Wallace ask how they can go on a mission through time and space, Mrs. Whatsit says, “Now we will tesser.” The children will learn that tesser is a shortcut through time and space that will allow them to travel quickly to other planets. Although the journey the children will take is fantasy, some of L’Engle’s story is based on real science. For example, a dimension is anything that can be measured in space. The three ordinary dimensions on Earth are length, width, and depth. Albert Einstein considered time a fourth dimension.

FOCUS ACTIVITY

A Wrinkle in Time Chapters 9–12

All of our experiences—good and bad—teach us and change us in different ways. Think about experiences that have taught you the most about yourself and others.

Journal

In your journal, write about a single experience that made you stronger and wiser in some way. Perhaps you struggled through a difficult task or helped a friend with a problem. What did this experience teach you?

Setting a Purpose

Read to find out how Meg’s journey changes her.

BACKGROUND

Did You Know?

Throughout the novel, L’Engle questions the human tendency to fear and misjudge what we do not understand. Camazotz is an extreme example of a world that does not allow differences. What can happen when differences are accepted and valued? In societies that value independence, we often see creativity, inventions, great literature and art, and knowledge. As you read further, notice Meg’s struggle to recognize her own unique gifts, especially those she once considered faults. Think about what message the author is trying to send in these final chapters.

Internal and External Conflict

In literature, an internal conflict is a struggle within a character, such as Meg’s struggle between fear and her wish to find her father. An external conflict takes place between a character and an outside force, such as the evil power the children must fight. The events of A Wrinkle in Time are driven by both internal and external conflicts. In the section you are about to read, the main characters face the most difficult part of their journey. Meg must take more responsibility than she ever imagined she would be asked or able to take. As you read, notice how Meg’s internal conflicts affect her ability to face the outside forces in Camazotz. You might also notice how the outside forces that have a hold over Camazotz are like the internal conflicts that keep Meg from realizing her own abilities. Read to find out where these conflicts lead the story.

Cause and Effect

Sometimes a certain event or action brings about another event or action. This is what is meant by cause and effect. Read the following statement: "Meg wore glasses; she felt unattractive." The first part of the statement, "Meg wore glasses," is the cause. The second part, "she felt unattractive," is the effect. In other words, it is the wearing of the glasses that causes her to feel unattractive.

Match the causes in the column on the left with the effects in the column on the right. Place the correct letter on each line.

Nature of conflict: conflict is the struggle or clash between two opposing forces, one of which is usually a person, often the main character, called the protagonist. Conflict occurs when the protagonist struggles against an antagonist or opposing force. The excitement in novels develops from the use of conflict.

There are four main types of conflict. Define each type and provide examples according to our classroom discussion.

- Man vs. Man-
- Man vs. Nature-
- Man vs. Society-
- Man vs. Himself-
